TIPS FROM DR RICK

1. Practice putting for five to ten minutes before you start your round.

2. Stretch before each drive.

3. Make your shot as smooth as possible. Start learning to put all your momentum into your drive by taking just one step. If you try to run up on the tee before you have mastered the "one-step", you will end up "herky-jerky" in the immortal words of Carlton Howard.

4. Try to play along with some pros whenever possible. Club members often have doubles matches in the evenings at Hobson or Kereiakes Park. We will usually have random pairings, or pair pros with amateurs.

5. Try to master a few types of disc, before getting dozens of different kinds. Having too many discs can confuse you, and you will not get really good at any one of them.

6. Subscribe to a comprehensive disc golf magazine, like Disc Golf World News, so you can keep up with the latest in equipment, tournaments, and techniques.
