

Postal Flying Disc Catalogue III
June 23, 1976

Dear Fellow Disc Fanciers,,

As you can plainly see the old Crane has finally gotten 'round to another full size catalogue. With this list all previous offerings are now void. PFDC III will remain in effect at least until October and possibly longer. I shall either publish a supplement around Rose Bowl time or a completely new list in October. In the coming months I hope to be able to offer some rather distinctive pieces from both Europe and Japan, many of them previously unknown. An address list of all the collectors known to me is finally ready (#264). Would also like to release a list of manufacturers sometime soon. This is proving to be difficult because most of the more interesting ones are now out of business. Expect to have it ready, in some form, by next month. More on this later. Don Pierce's book on the Pro (including Moonlighter and All American) may be out by the end of the year. Now if we could only get him started on the rest of the line..... Hope you all were able to see the Skipper's fine Pie Tin article in RW. Let's see, if there are about forty tins to collect and they only cost $75.00 each a complete set would only be $$$$$$.

Notation and grading are unchanged from previous catalogues but are reviewed below for any forgetful souls and/or newcomers. Was flattered to see that both Hadenfeldt and Pierce used similar cryptography in their recent lists; perhaps we may see a standardization of terms in the near future! Before concluding this small preamble I would like to write a few words about the venerable All-Star. As many of you already know, there are two tools for this disc although they are not identified by the manufacturer. On one a faint ring mark is visible on the underside of the crown just inboard of the crown scarp. This tool is referred to in this catalogue as the "ringed" or "ring" tool. The second cavity lacks this feature and is correspondingly referred to as the "ringless" tool. Another matter of some confusion are the different "runs", "generations", or as I have called them "periods". The first three of these present little difficulty since they are associated with distinct and obvious tooling differences. However since the tools were reworked into their present configuration discs have been made from them using three distinct materials. The first of these was extremely flexible and is referred to herein as "third period". The next is almost indistinguishable from the original material and is called "fourth period". These were made in two separate runs during January and March of this year. Current production is firmer than third and softer than fourth. These discs were made in April and are called "fifth period" in this catalogue. Whatever you wish to call them I hope this catalogue provides you with some enjoyment and possibly even a little information as well.

Smooth Flights[®],

The White Crane
